It's one of those things that's only possible in California.

How do you outlaw reporting a crime to law enforcement?

I noticed that this bill (which is a Senate bill) appears to outlaw the doing as well as the threatening – am I misreading it?

I still don't see how this can stop me from verifying lack of status to ICE, and then sharing that information with OIG.

Also, they are missing the fact that I never make threats. The times when I have had litigants deported, I have always simply taken action rather than make any threats. The attorneys find out when their clients are already gone. I don't see how they can stop me from reporting a crime.
